Property Description

This extraordinary property, located in the picturesque mountains of Turrúcares, Alajuela, presents a unique investment and development opportunity. With an extensive land of 8 hectares and 363 square meters, this property features a house that is built to 80%, but currently stands in a state of abandonment. Despite its current condition, the house boasts an impressive architectural design and is strategically positioned to take advantage of 360-degree views overlooking the Central Valley and the country's coasts. However, a revitalization project is required to restore this house to its original splendor. The natural surroundings and existing infrastructure provide a solid foundation to transform this property into a unique retreat in the mountains of Alajuela. Various options can be explored, from completing the house as an exclusive residence to developing commercial projects that leverage its strategic location.
